

Israeli Note to Nixon Seeks Basis for Renewal of Talks

By Hedrick Smith

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (UPI)—Premier Golda Meir of Israel has sent President Nixon a new message to try to lay the groundwork for resumption of Arab-Israeli peace negotiations.

The Israeli ambassador, Yitzhak Rabin, delivered the premier's message to the State Department yesterday afternoon during a meeting with Joseph J. Sisco, assistant secretary of state for Near Eastern and South Asian Affairs.

Israeli officials said that Israel had not set out hard and fast conditions for returning to the negotiations, but was seeking broader understanding with Washington. They gave no details. Previously, Foreign Minister Abba Eban had indicated Israel's interest in longer-term military aid agreements with the United States, preferably extending through 1972, to replace the piecemeal arms deals that Israel has had in the past with the United States.

Mr. Eban's comments were made to the press here last month before the latest Israeli cabinet meetings on the question of returning to the negotiations.

Israeli leaders are also understood to be interested in assurances that Washington will seek to extend Middle East cease-fire if the talks are resumed and then later break down and, if the talks become deadlocked, that the United States will not withhold arms shipments as a means of forcing Israel to make negotiating concessions.

But it was not disclosed whether these assurances were specifically sought in Mrs. Meir's written message to Mr. Nixon. Well-placed informants indicated that her message set out the views of the Israeli cabinet without specified requirements for returning to the talks, as Washington wishes.

The Nixon administration has deliberately remained quiet about pronouncements from Israel and Egypt about their terms for resuming negotiations or extending the cease-fire beyond its Feb. 5 deadline.

American officials interpreted a statement Monday by Anwar Sadat, the Egyptian president, as jockeying for position prior to the expected start of talks.

Mr. Sadat declared that Cairo would not renew the cease-fire unless Israel had agreed to a timetable for the withdrawal of its troops from captured Arab territory.

Other officials here said that Egyptian officials have said that Cairo's requirement was a serious start of the negotiations and Washington is inclined to regard this as the established Egyptian position.

On March 31 the German ambassador to Guatemala, Count Karl von Spreti, was kidnapped by a group of leftists and found murdered a week later. On June 11 Bonn's ambassador in Brazil, Ehrenfried von Holleben, was kidnapped in Rio de Janeiro and released five days later in exchange for the freeing of 40 political prisoners.

On July 19, two German technicians, Eugen Schulhauser and Guenther Lerch, were seized in Bolivia and freed four days later in exchange for ten political prisoners.

aimed at suspending tomorrow's trial, informed sources said.

Police guarded the Beihl home here and the West German Consulate in Bilbao, and searched all cars crossing into France at nearby Irun. Roadblocks were still manned tonight throughout the area.

Mr. Beihl, who is married to a Basque woman, has been honorary consul in San Sebastian since 1965. He has been living in San Sebastian since 1947, and since 1950 has been representative there of the West German chemical firm Bayer.

This is the fourth kidnapping of West German officials this year, although the first in Europe.

Israelis Give Swiss 15 Years In Bomb Plot

TEL AVIV, Dec. 2 (UPI)—An Israeli military court today sentenced Bruno Breguet, 20, of Locarno, Switzerland, to 15 years imprisonment on charges he planned to plant Arab guerrilla bombs in Israel's tallest office building.

The three judges on the court said they found Breguet guilty on counts of belonging to an illegal organization, the Popular Front for the Liberation of Palestine, and of bringing explosive devices into the country illegally to plant bombs in Tel Aviv's 33-story Shalom Tower.

Breguet was arrested last June 23 after he stepped ashore in Haifa. Customs officers became suspicious when they saw he was wearing a heavy overcoat and thick scarf on a blazing, hot summer day.

The prosecutor said the explosives were "hidden" under the overcoat.

He was sentenced to seven years in jail on the first charge and 15 years on the second, both to run concurrently. Before the sentence was announced, the prosecution withdrew a more serious charge against Breguet of bringing explosives into the country illegally to commit sabotage, for which the maximum penalty is death.

Kennedy, Jackie Portraits to Hang In White House

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (UPI)—A portrait of the late President John F. Kennedy will be unveiled at the White House in January along with a painting of his widow, Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, it was learned today.

The oil portraits of Mr. Kennedy and the former first lady were painted by a New York artist, Aaron Shickler, 43. Both have the approval of Mrs. Onassis.

There were indications that the Kennedy portrait is perhaps not as acceptable to the entire Kennedy family, but Mr. Shickler hastened to say, "I don't mean to say there is a schism."

Hussein Sees Sadat, Urges Closer Ties

Tells Egyptian Chief Coordination Needed

CAIRO, Dec. 2 (UPI)—King Hussein of Jordan called for closer ties between his country and Egypt when he met President Anwar Sadat today in the second stage of his six-nation foreign tour.

Official sources said King Hussein talked about the post-civil war situation in Jordan and outlined the reasons for his trip to Europe and the United States.

During the two-hour meeting, he emphasized that his government was trying to implement the peace agreements made with the Palestinian guerrillas after the September civil war.

Officials said he emphasized "the importance of coordination between Egypt and Jordan in the face of Israeli aggression."

Mr. Sadat stressed the importance of the next stage in the conflict with Israel and urged a rallying of effort to liquidate Israeli "aggression."

The Eastern Front

The two also discussed methods of strengthening the eastern front against Israel, which comprises Syria, Iraq and Jordan.

The talks were the first official discussions Mr. Sadat has had with King Hussein since he was elected head of state to succeed Gamal Abdel Nasser Oct. 16.

King Hussein flew to Cairo earlier today from Riyadh after talks with King Faisal of Saudi Arabia, which Amman sources said were aimed at securing support for an Arab summit meeting and cash for the Jordanian economy.

Political sources in Amman said King Hussein wanted Western support for a more even-handed policy in the Middle East and Arab backing for a summit to discuss the question of a Palestinian state.

Fence-Mending Mission

His Cairo trip was seen largely as a fence-mending mission after a confrontation between the two capitals over King Hussein's handling of the civil war with the Palestinians.

Coinciding with King Hussein's presence in the Egyptian capital was the presence of two high-ranking officials of the el-Fatah guerrilla movement, Salah Khalaf and Farouk Kaddoumi. They were seeking talks with Egyptian leaders and political sources said they probably would ask guerrilla grievances against King Hussein's troops.

King Hussein scheduled a new round of talks with Egyptian leaders tonight.

Tomorrow he will leave for London and later continue his tour to Washington, Paris and Bonn.

West Bank State Condemned

AMMAN, Dec. 2 (Reuters)—Jordan today condemned plans to set up a Palestinian state in Arab land occupied by Israel since the 1967 war as "a conspiracy against the unity of the eastern and western banks of the River Jordan."

The description was given in the speech from the throne with which Crown Prince Hassan, brother of King Hussein and regent during his current world tour, opened the fourth ordinary session of the Jordanian parliament.

Truce Violation Charged by Egypt In Boat Incident

CAIRO, Dec. 2 (UPI)—Egypt prepared a note to the United Nations today protesting the Israeli sinking of one of its vessels. It described the incident as a violation of the cease-fire.

A Cairo spokesman said: "Israel's aggression on one of our unarmed boats is a criminal act and constitutes a violation of the cease-fire. Egypt, therefore, will exercise its right to take appropriate action and complain to the United Nations about Israel's violation of the cease-fire."

The sinking was an indication of rising tension between the two sides. It follows Israel's rejection of a demand for a timetable for Israeli troop withdrawal from Arab land taken in the six-day war.

Cairo's Voice of the Arabs radio said statements by Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban rejecting Cairo's demand "show that Israel does not intend to withdraw from occupied Arab territory."

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat warned Monday that Egypt would agree to a third extension of the Middle East cease-fire scheduled to end Feb. 5 only if Israel presented a timetable for the pullout of its troops.

Canada's Commons Passes Bill Aimed at Curbing FLQ

By Jay Walz

OTTAWA, Dec. 2 (UPI)—The House of Commons, after four weeks of debate, approved yesterday Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's emergency powers bill to replace the War Measures Act.

The bill, which rarely contravenes Commons actions, will continue to outlaw the radical Front for the Liberation of Quebec, which claimed responsibility for two kidnappings to achieve their political goals.

The vote, 174 to 31, reflected a general approval of the substitute measure in principle. But it did not indicate the extent of opposition among members who declared that it either curtailed civil rights too sharply or did not go far enough.

"Now is the time for real economic reform," declared Andre Fortin, a member of the right-wing Creditiste party who represents a Quebec district. Mr. Fortin voted against the government's bill because, he argued, it did not deal with "the real problems facing Quebec"—lack of economic and cultural opportunity.

However, all Liberals and most Conservatives voted for the measure. Only the left-wing New Democrats and the Creditistes voted solidly against it.

Despite Envoy Exchange

No Significant Thaw Seen
In Chinese-Soviet Relations

By Lee Lescage

HONG KONG, Dec. 2 (UPI)—There has been no significant warming of Chinese-Soviet relations despite the two nations' recent trade agreement and exchange of ambassadors, analysts here believe.

Rather, China's approach to the Soviet Union is a striking example of Peking's pragmatic diplomatic methods, designed to further Chinese aims without making any concessions of Maoist principle.

Relations with Russia have become formally correct after armed clashes along the border a year ago came close to triggering wider fighting, but the Chinese repeatedly make their anti-Soviet feelings clear. While the two countries exchanged ambassadors last month after a four-year hiatus, travelers returning from China reported seeing new anti-Soviet wall posters in major Chinese cities. The posters are no longer prominently displayed on main streets as they were when the border clashes were taking place in 1969, but they are easily found in the smaller residential streets of Canton and Peking.

The draft of China's new state constitution, which was apparently approved by the Communist Party Central Committee in early September, declares as state policy that the Chinese Army must "defend against the subversion and aggression of the imperialists, the social imperialists and their running dogs." For imperialists read Americans, and social imperialist is China's code word for the Soviet Union.

U.S.-Russia Derided
In the Chinese view of the world, repeated in every major foreign policy statement over the last six months, the United States and the Soviet Union are conspiring to divide the world. They are derided by Peking as the two "super-powers."

A recent example is a People's Daily editorial defending Latin American nations' rights to set 500-mile limits to their territorial waters. "Tailing behind U.S. imperialism, social imperialism has in recent years plotted a series of intrigues over the question of ocean rights," the editorial said.

Secret Soviet-American deals had further revealed the "aggressive and expansionist features" of the Soviet Union.

Recently, Peking has also relied on its Albanian ally to voice harsh criticism of the Russians. China announced last month that it was translating into Chinese a major speech by Albanian party chief Enver Hoxha. The speech is a lengthy anti-Soviet diatribe.

This week, diplomats representing Russia's closest allies walked out of a Peking reception when the Albanian Ambassador to China made a speech critical of Moscow. All speeches made in Peking are cleared in advance with Chinese officials.

Tension Ebbs

However, although China shows no signs of wanting to relax its guard in dealing with the Soviet Union, Peking is clearly more relaxed about the possibility of war than it was last year and the shrillness of anti-Soviet warnings when war tension was at its height has been dropped from official Chinese statements.

The tension began to ebb after Soviet Premier Alexei N. Kosygin made his unprecedented stopover at Peking airport in September, 1969. During talks with Chinese Premier Chou En-lai, the two leaders agreed to set up a conference on their border problems. The conference is still meeting in Peking and the Russians reported last month that there has been little progress.

Even the restoration of correct diplomatic relations, a move long favored by the Russians, took more than a year from the Kosygin visit. The restoration is part of China's worldwide effort to resume diplomatic contacts after the disruption of the cultural revolution. Vasily S. Tolstikov, the Soviet ambassador to China, arrived in Peking in October. China dispatched its envoy to Moscow, Liu Hsin-chuan, last month.

The exchange of ambassadors was followed by the dispatch of a Soviet trade delegation to Peking on Nov. 12. After ten days of talks, the delegation signed a trade agreement, the first between the two countries since 1967. No details of the agreement were made public, not even the period of time it covers.

Soviet-Chinese trade in 1969 totaled about $2 billion but had dropped to about $55 million last year. In the latest of a series of complaints, Radio Moscow today attacked China for carrying on four-fifths of its trade with non-Communist nations.

Catholics
Split Over
Divorce LawVatican Fails to Back
Referendum Effort

ROME, Dec. 2 (AP)—The Roman Catholic leadership in and outside the Vatican was divided today over what to do about the legalization of divorce in Italy.

The country's largest church-owned newspaper took a hard line against the controversial divorce law approved by parliament Tuesday. The paper, L'Avvenire of Milan, called in front-page headlines for a referendum to repeal divorce. It said that a nationwide vote—staunchly opposed by most political parties—would be a "free and democratic manifestation of popular sovereignty."

The Vatican's reaction showed less boldness and more uncertainty. The absence of Pope Paul VI, nearing the end of his Asian and Pacific journey, reportedly had a bearing on this.

The Vatican daily, L'Osservatore Romano, denounced the new law for the second straight day. But its emphasis again was on the "suffering" the law brought to the Pope and to the church in general.

Although the Vatican reportedly will hand Italy a formal protest, charging that the law violates the church-state concordat, it refrained from calling even indirectly for a national referendum.

Two dozen militant Roman Catholic intellectuals and politicians started circulating a referendum petition almost as soon as the divorce bill was passed by the Chamber of Deputies early yesterday morning. The initiative lacks any open backing by the Vatican or Premier Emilio Colombo's Christian Democratic party, the largest in Italy.

The party, the only major one to oppose divorce, was said to be sharply divided on whether to support a referendum.

Other Business
Meanwhile, Mr. Colombo conferred with President Giuseppe Saragat today. Reliable sources said that the premier had expressed the wish that with the divorce issue out of the way, his center-left coalition government might be able to set aside differences and move on to other important business.

But Luigi Gedda, president of a national Catholic civic committee that is supported by many Christian Democratic politicians, called for a referendum.

The Italian Bishops' Conference, anticipating passage of the divorce bill, had issued a statement on Nov. 16 justifying a referendum. But it is understood that the bishops, except for a few conservative prelates, are not particularly anxious to see a referendum held.

Protestants Demonstrate

Pope Backs Youth Protest,
But Cites Lessons of History

SYDNEY, Dec. 2 (UPI)—Pope Paul VI told a crowded meeting of 11 Christian churches tonight that ecumenical unity can be achieved only through suffering and that history cannot be written off overnight.

A radical Protestant minister was ejected from the services, attended by 3,000 persons in Sydney's city hall, when he stood up and silently displayed anti-Catholic slogans painted on his shirt. Outside, a small band of militant Protestants marched in silent protest, one riding a donkey.

Tonight's speech ended the last full day of the Pope's visit to Australia, the first by a Pope. He leaves tomorrow for Jakarta, Hong Kong and Ceylon, to end a nine-day trip that will have taken him 25,000 miles.

In a morning devoted to the young and elderly, the Pope gave a qualified endorsement of worldwide youth protest movements but warned against wholesale rejection of the lessons of history. He delivered the homily at a special youth mass at Randwick racecourse attended by 150,000 under a hot sun.

He told them there are ways and means of seeking reform, adding: "If you turn back on yourselves, if you set yourselves up as supreme judges of your truth, if you reject the past wholesale, then the world of tomorrow will not be noticeably better, even if it is different."

Visits the Aged
He visited a convent this morning and spoke to elderly priests, and later visited an old-age home. At a suburban children's hospital the pontiff distributed toys collected by the Vatican.

Taxi Driver Seized, Ransom Recovered

Paris Police Find Kidnapped Boy

PARIS, Dec. 2 (UPI)—French police said tonight they had arrested a Tunisian taxi driver on charges of kidnapping a 7-year-old boy in Paris Monday.

Police found the boy, Alain Lehard, alive and well beside a national highway today at Marnes-la-Matife, about 38 miles north-east of Paris, after trailing his father, Jean Lehard, 35, to a roadside rendezvous where he was to leave 50,000 francs ($8,000) ransom money.

Police named the Tunisian as Mohammed Leframi, an employee of the C-7 cab company. They said they thought he asked Alain Lehard to get into his taxi. The ransom, by an unusual coincidence, never reached the kidnapper, though the father left it for him. It was recovered in its entirety by police.

Money in Bag
Police said that moments after Jean Lehard placed the money in a bag next to a road sign as instructed by the kidnapper, the kidnapper emerged from his hiding place 100 yards away to retrieve it. But a passing truck driver spotted the bag, stopped, picked it up, drove away and handed it in at the nearest police station.

Police sources said detectives were investigating the possibility that the Lehard kidnapping and the abduction of a 6-year girl last April were the work of the same kidnapper.

The two children both went to an English-French bilingual school just over a mile from the Lehard home in the Latin Quarter, and both children were abducted by men driving taxis.

Second in 2 Weeks
Monday's kidnapping was the second child abduction in Paris in two weeks, and the 23rd in France over the past ten years. Ten of the abducted children were slain by their kidnappers.

A 15-month-old baby kidnapped Nov. 18 in Paris was found alive and well three days later 75 miles away in Rouen. Police have arrested two men and are searching for a girl accomplice.

Detailed newspaper carried by popular newspaper Alain's father took him to every morning by car, but returned each day by taxi, said that on the day of the kidnapping he unsuspiciously a stolen taxi driven by a napper.

Returning from work at his son missing, Jean called on nearby shops and in case his son was with finding no trace of the father alerted police.

Somalia Buries
Evils of the Past

MOGADISHU, Somalia, Dec. 2 (Reuters)—Somalia buried the evils of its past in a wooden coffin after an impressive state funeral last night at the sports palace here.

Written on the empty coffin were the words, "tribalism," "corruption," "nepotism," "injustice," and "colonialism."

Maj. Gen. Mohamed Siad, President of the Supreme Revolutionary Council, told the funeral crowd of 10,000: "We are burying here today all evils which kept us backward for centuries."

The burial took place after a slow procession through the city accompanied by music. The entire funeral was broadcast on a nationwide radio network.

Unruh Says He Plans
To Quit Party Politics
LOS ANGELES, Dec. 2 (AP)—Jesse Unruh, unsuccessful Democratic candidate for governor last month, said yesterday that he is bowing out of party politics for the immediate future "to teach, write and lecture about what is wrong with today's government and today's politics."

Mr. Unruh, 48, who gave up his powerful State Assembly Democratic leadership in his unsuccessful bid to unseat Gov. Ronald Reagan, added: "I want to point up how our system can be improved—especially the state tax structure—and show people how to use their power to get what they should have."

Cardin's Latest Project: of Couture But Culture

By Hebe Dorsey

Dec. 2.—Pierre Cardin's latest project, launched in not another couture but in a $1 million culture that he calls "Esprit Cardin."

In the former Théâtre d'Assurance on Avenue de la Concorde, the two-story locale has been converted to house two a cinema, an art gallery, a lecture room, a dance room, a restaurant, a bookstore. The is topped by two vast rooms which one enjoys the finest, latest sights, the neo-classic, colorful, Cardin had hundreds of workers to make the interior modern. So far, only it is finished. The rest open—hopefully—early ater, which seats 720 s an expandable stage, ushroom shaped seats in and out, plenty of nd no curtain. Cardin he old vaudeville cab- menors—those side standing room only— e said, "they're lively."

No Tipping

are no usherettes in s and lace collars as d-fashioned theaters, ound men in gray i turtle-neck sweaters to your seat and are d to accept tips.

et vendors are nestled aped, futuristic stain- otic and the street- foyers are decorated colored, lighted-front- istic totems designed artists.

at's performance, "Je infant-là," a musical Roger Vitrac, was ardin's friends—Salvador Dali, his famous mous- taché at a nervous angle, play- wright Marcel Achard, fashion designers Marc Bohan, Philippe Gubourge and Jean-Louis Scherrer, Georges Cravenne, the Carita sisters, Patrick and Mar- tine Guérard-Hermès and Mrs. Hervé Alphand and André Ol- iver. Cardin himself, as nervous as a bride, arrived last.

Cardin's ambition is to make this center a platform for ex- perimental art and a launching pad for new talent. But he also plans to use part of the space to display his "Environment," a loose term he applies to every- thing pertaining to industrial design. A relentless creator, Cardin likes to remodel every- thing—ashtrays, glass, silver, porcelain, rugs and furniture. He already has substantial con- tracts with such firms as Daum glass and Christofle silver.

Two revolutionary seats were on display in the foyer last night. One, called "The Womb," is of clear jersey and spreads out like a fat mamma. Another, of alternate black and white plastic leaves, looks like a huge book.

Nothing New

This interest in the theater is nothing new in Cardin's life. As a young man, he designed sets and costumes for Jean Cocteau and Christian Bérard and rarely misses a theater premiere.

"I'm not landing into this cold," he said. "I've always been deeply involved in the theater."

One might wonder why Cardin, who has built a worldwide fashion empire, should tackle what looks like a non-money-making operation.

"For kicks," he said. "I believe I've done just about all I can do with fashion and I need to go ahead. I don't care if I lose money. I don't need possessions. I don't smoke, I don't drink, I don't gamble and neither do I own a chateau or a Rolls-

Pierre Cardin in his remodeled theater.

Royce." (He drives a beat-up 404.)

But friends of Cardin predict that, with his business acumen, the designer is again ahead of the pack. He has stretched his couture talent just as tight as he possibly can; the future of couture is dim anyhow and the next best bet is to diversify. With his so-called cultural center, Cardin is no doubt sincerely pleasing himself but he is also adding potent publicity power to his label, which is already worth millions.

Designer Jean-Louis Scherrer, whose fashion house stalled for a couple of years because of a squabble with his former backer, has found a new angel: Count Hubert d'Ornano, owner of the Orlane cosmetics house.

The news was announced last night at Maxim's by Count d'Ornano, who said the new fashion house will be at 51 Avenue Montaigne, a block down from Dior.

Although the place is being remodeled, Mr. Scherrer is al- ready hard at work on his collection which he will show to- gether with the other Paris couturiers at the end of January.

FLORENCE MUSIC

Operatic Winter Begins With Bellini's 'I Puritani'

By William Weaver

FLORENCE, Dec. 2.—Overshadowed by its long-established, famous spring music festival, the Maggio Musicale, Florence's regular winter opera season tends to attract little public notice. But, though there is not the same array of international stars, the winter season at the Teatro Comunale often deserves attention, and last night's premiere of Bellini's "I Puritani," inaugurating the Florentine operatic winter, was noteworthy, for several reasons. Chief of these was the masterful reading of the young maestro Riccardo Muti, now the permanent conductor of the orchestra.

The Florence orchestra is notoriously erratic (as eminent visiting conductors have learned, sometimes with bitterness), but it also has a number of excellent musicians, and Muti, in the few months he has been at the helm, has already fused the various elements and has established a beautiful, warm sound. Again and again, one was impressed by solo passages, including the famous difficult solo for horn, which came off splendidly. And the ensemble playing was even more impressive.

Maestro Muti clearly has his own views about Bellini, and in his "Puritani" the pre-echoes of Verdi, a decade or so later, were underlined. The choruses, notably in Act One, were taken at a brisk clip; too brisk at times, since rapport between orchestra and stage was not always perfect. But this rapport improved as the evening went on, and in the last act, the chorus-like the orchestra and the soloists—was at its very best, thrilling and moving.

Popular Soprano

The Dutch soprano Cristina Deutekom is popular in Italy, and in the coloratura repertory she does not have many rivals. The voice is not especially pretty, but it is agile and true, and the high notes come effortlessly, securely. Though the singer is not an actress, she managed to convey the pathos and candor of poor Elvira, and made the first act finale "Oh vieni al tempio" meltingly sweet (Muti's pacing of this finale was particularly sensitive).

Tenor Nicolai Gedda got off to a rough start, the top notes—admittedly fiendish—in his opening aria giving him difficulty. But in the last act, he maneuvered the same notes with greater fluency and brought out also the dramatic urgency of Bellini's subtle, various, irresistible music. Except for the solid and intelligently phrased Giorgio of basso Agostino Ferrin, the rest of the singing was undistinguished. Sesto Bruscantini is a great comic bass, but he was sorely misused—and not only vocally—as Riccardo, lacking the steady line and the lyrical quality that the role demands.

Except for a few unnecessary shiftings of the chorus, Sandro Secchi's staging was deft, often unabashedly—and rightly—satiric. Jürgen Henze's sets were romantic, the empty interiors less attractive than the smoky sunrise and the autumnal castle seen outside. The costumes, by Anna Anni, were handsome; Elvira was given a lovely Edwardian wedding dress.

ppened that in the ys before the war as clients in their urants the two older Pasha of Marrakesh, Le Glaoui. Le Glaoui had more wives than an ordinary man would know what to do with—some 300 in all.

The pasha had an older brother, and he, too, owned a female conglomerate. And when he died, what do you think he did? He left everything to the pasha, who already had this surplus. The brother's cotu- rage included a woman named Rhadija, a great beauty in her youth.

In those days, when harems were permitted, there was one prerequisite for all the women: They were obliged to learn to cook. And when the harem began to fade from those girlish cheeks, some of the wives were given the old sauceman and sent to the kitchen to cook for the latest group of brides.

By the time the pasha fell heir to Rhadija, she was no great beauty, but she had be- come a formidable fabricator of Moroccan cooking. "But no matter how well she cooked," Mrs. Sebilion said, "she was a bad character for the pasha's household. Very bad-tempered and created unpleasantness with all the other ladies. So he gave her to me with the provision that she come back to his kitchen for any special feast days."

The pasha, in fact, went one step further: He gave Rhadija, who wore a veil, one of his slaves as a husband so that she would be protected as she went back and forth to the Sebilion home. Mrs. Sebilion and her daughter—now both elegantly white-haired—were not unmindful of their good fortune. Miss Larochette immediately pursued the Arab language (during World War II she served as an inter- preter with the American Red Cross) to be able to commu- cate more fully with Rhadija. For 15 years under that marvel- ous cook's tutelage, she learned the secrets of making the finest native dishes: Pastilla, an in- credibly good, incredibly rich pigeon pie; couscous, the excep- tional cereal and vegetable dish with chicken and lamb; chicken with preserved lemon or olives; splendid charcoal meats Mor- roccan-style and so on.

Deserved Accolades

The food at La Maison Arabe, which opened 15 years ago, is generally conceded by Moroc- cans today to deserve any accolades that have been given it.

To arrive at La Maison Arabe you go to the Medina. And there you approach the least pretentious alleyway with a simple sign above an arch. Then through the alley with its crack- ed plaster walls and you find a heavy door with metal studs. And here is the first evidence of elegance, a small, highly polished brass plaque with the words in Arabic and French, Maison Arabe.

Inside there is magnificence—pure white walls, splendid mosaic tiles and sumptuous dining areas with cushions and pillows for only 25 guests. You must make a reservation days and at times weeks in advance, and there is no menu. One of the women discusses your dinner on the phone. There must be at least two in the party, and the cost is 45 dirham ($9) a person.

Mrs. Sebilion and her daugh- ter have just refurbished their restaurant. The living accom- modations with hand-hammered tile and Andalusian sculpture, vast bathrooms and specially made furniture will not be open until mid or late summer. The address is 67 Rue R.M.A.-Bab Doukkala; telephone 226-04.

(Rhadija, incidentally, died five years ago at the age of 70. When the pasha died in 1956, he had only 30 wives and the custom of having many wives was going out of style. He was 88 years old.)

nan Bank Rate Cut; Inflow Continues

(NYT)—West German bank today raised its rate against high inflation capital by 0.5 percent to 6.5 percent.

Today, as well as before the revaluation, Germany continues to have an embarrassingly large trade surplus and a near-record level of reserves.

Today's lowering of the bank rate was the third such step this year. The rate, which determines the interest at which commercial banks obtain loans from the central bank, stood at a record 7.5 percent from March to July this year. It was also announced that the bank's Lombard rate—the rate on collateral loans—will henceforth be 7.5 percent, down from 8 percent. The Lombard and bank rates are usually always changed simultaneously.

Mr. Klausen said that although high inflows of foreign money prompted today's action, domestic economic considerations also played a role.

The gradual change in the overall economic situation, Mr. Klausen explained, "permits such limited action also from a domestic point of view." Mr. Klausen did not elaborate, but he was clearly alluding to increasing signs that West Germany's long, record boom is slackening off.

Declines Overseas

Mr. Klausen noted that interest rates abroad—particularly in the United States—had again been reduced in the 15 days since the last German central bankers' session. He expressed the hope that foreign money transfers would now stabilize at a "reasonable volume."

He said that the central bankers did not decide to change the minimum interest requirements. He stressed his hope that there would be no further need for major credit policy decisions this year. The next central bank council session will take place on Dec. 16.

Banking circles and major industries welcomed today's action as a "necessary corrective measure." A spokesman for the Federation of West German Industries hailed the step as one blocking further capital inflows from abroad "without abandoning the central bank's tight credit policy."

Benguet Finds Copper

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (Reuters)—Benguet Consolidated Inc. has discovered a deposit of about 500,000 tons of ore averaging 3 percent copper in the form of chalcopyrite, company president R.W. Crosby said today.

Orders Off 1969 Level

(Reuters)—New German industry orders rose 2.6 percent from the first month of 1969, the Economy said today.

Orders rose only 1.8 percent in the second month, compared with 5.2 percent in the first month of 1969.

Banking circles and major industries welcomed today's action as a "necessary corrective measure." A spokesman for the Federation of West German Industries hailed the step as one blocking further capital inflows from abroad "without abandoning the central bank's tight credit policy."

U.K. Reserve Total Up After Repayments

LONDON, Dec. 2.—Britain's gold and dollar reserves rose by $27 million ($4.8 million) last month to $21.8 billion ($2.8 billion) the highest total since November 1967, when the pound was devalued, the Treasury announced today.

The gain came despite advance repayments totaling $24.5 million due in December to the Bank for International Settlements and to the United States. There was also a previously announced gold subscription payment of $37.5 million to the International Monetary Fund, the Treasury said.

The BIS repayment was the sixth of eight quarterly installments of $31 million.

The increased IMF subscription enables Britain to increase its supply of Special Drawing Rights. Britain's reserves rose by $30 million in October, but that was one of the few months in which Britain chose not to repay outstanding international debts.

Most of the debt was incurred during the futile attempt to stave off the 1967 devaluation.

French Reserves Up

PARIS, Dec. 2.—The Finance Ministry said today France's foreign currency reserves rose by 1,237 billion francs ($224 million) in November.

Bank of France reserves now total 26,601 billion francs ($4.79 billion).

IIG Continues To 'Retrench'

By Alfred Friendly Jr.

ROME, Dec. 2 (NYT)—Jerome Hoffman, head of Investors International Group, left here yesterday amid reports that the transfer of his office from London to Rome had not helped the company's economic position.

Mr. Hoffman could not be reached for comment before his departure on what associates said was a routine, short "business trip in Europe." Michael Shellis, a company accountant, said only, "We are in a period of retrenchment."

The "retrenchment" involved the dismissal this week of most of the 30-odd employees at headquarters here, opened only five weeks ago after about 75 percent of the London staff was fired in the transfer.

It was also learned that the fund's senior vice-president, Bishara Abboud, has left Rome for Beirut.

Officials say they have received no orders to cancel plans to set up a finance company to invest in Italian real estate. They note IIG is probably suffering from the same financial problems as Investors Overseas Service and Gramco fund groups. "I do not know what the volume of redemptions has been," said one of Mr. Hoffman's associates, "but I am sure they have been high. Everyone in the business has the same problem."

In a recent interview, Mr. Hoffman said that, despite the fact that he could not sell his mutual fund in Italy, the company had brought in $300,000 in sales as opposed to only $40,000 in redemptions.

He said IIG's Real Estate Fund of America had assets of $100 million and the Fund of The Seven Seas was worth $1 million.

SEC Considering Commission Shift

BOCA RATON, Fla., Dec. 2 (UPI)—The Securities & Exchange Commission is considering a compromise on one of its key proposals for a new stock market commission system, an SEC member revealed today.

At the Investment Bankers Association convention here, Commissioner Richard B. Smith gave the first hint that the SEC might raise its ceiling on the size of transactions subject to fixed charges.

"I think there can be some compromise on what constitutes a large order and we are presently giving consideration to this area," he said.

SEC chairman Hamer H. Budge has proposed that commission charges on all orders involving more than 100,000 shares be negotiated.

Nixon Aides Urge Steep Expansion

By Edwin L. Dale Jr.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 2 (NYT)—Some of President Nixon's most influential advisers are advocating an economic policy for next year aimed at exceptionally rapid expansion of the economy—a rise in "real" total output of 8 percent in the last quarter of 1971 over the final quarter this year.

This would be about twice the growth in a "normally" prosperous year and has seldom been achieved. It would be sought through strongly expansionary monetary and fiscal policies.

High officials urging this course concede that it would require a substantially greater expansion of money and credit than the Federal Reserve Board has so far been willing to permit. A difference of opinion between the administration and the central bank is readily acknowledged, though officials insist there is "no war."

Inflation Seen Receding

The 8 percent increase in output of goods and services would be after adjusting for inflation and not just in dollar terms. While some inflation would continue, the advisers believe it should actually be less than this year even with the rapid rise in demand and production.

Standard forecasts put the gross national product next year at between $104 billion and $105 billion—which, it is estimated, would leave unemployment next year about as high as now. If the 8 percent target is achieved, there would be a notable decline in unemployment—now at 5.6 percent and going up—next year.

The reasoning behind the policy involves what officials call the "re-entry problem"—re-entry into the zone of full employment by late 1972, a widely agreed-upon goal.

With rapid growth in 1971, and the resulting drops in unemployment, it is argued, by early 1972 it would be possible to start devaluing. Then, as full employment usually defined as 4 percent unemployment) was approached and finally achieved, the economy would be moving along its "normal," long-term growth path instead of booming.

By contrast, it is argued that if recovery is allowed to be sluggish in 1971, the subsequent big push in 1972, a presidential election year, would mean that the economy would be re-entering the full employment zone at a headlong, inflationary rate, and the problem of major inflationary pressure with the economy straining at capacity would recur.

Some Problems With the Fed

The problem arises over monetary policy. The expansionists believe that the nation's money supply—currency and checking accounts—would probably have to increase at an annual rate of 8 or 9 percent.

The latest published Fed target, from August, was a growth rate of 5 percent. Revised figures show that the money supply has grown, through September, at a rate of 6 percent. But policy, made about once a month by the powerful Federal Open Market Committee, could change.

The worry of the expansionists is that monetary policy works with a lag. If rapid economic growth next year is to be achieved, they feel, monetary policy should probably be changing now.

Europe Industrial Challenge To U.S. Seen 'Exaggerated'

By Hobart Rowen

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (UPI)—The prospects for a major European challenge to U.S. industry were greeted with a certain degree of skepticism here today at a symposium on "The Challenge of Europe."

Lord Robbins, chairman of the Financial Times, declared that "a great experiment in supra-national commercial policy... is taking place today in continental Europe."

But Giovanni Agnelli, president of Italy's Fiat, said he thought the European challenge to U.S. industry had been "grossly exaggerated."

Mr. Agnelli continued: "In the near future, I am certain that there can be no dangerous challenge from Europe on the American market, just as, allow me to say, I have never believed that the big American corporations could plunge European industry into a major crisis."

Political Element

Several speakers stressed that the much talked about prospective European economic and monetary union would need a political base to make it effective. For example, Hermann J. Abs, president of Deutsche Bank's supervisory board, said: "One of the essential steps to be taken is to give real power and decision to a European parliament."

And Baron Guy de Rothschild, president of Banque Paribas, declared bluntly: "It seems that no European union is prepared at this stage, to give up its national sovereignty, which... means control over its own money market and capital market..."

British Case

Roy Jenkins, deputy leader of the Labor party, laid out the economic and political case for British entry into the Common Market, adding that exclusion of countries that wanted to join has been "a major weakness" of the Six.

Fourth-quarter earnings, bow-tiedly concerned over what he ever, slipped to $119 million, or 35.9 cents a share, from $121 million, or 36.1 cents a share, reflecting a slight decline in the earnings growth rate, though the study could be completed in two years or less for about $500,000.

Rep. Moss said that he was particularly concerned over what he termed "the failure of the New York Stock Exchange to do adequate audits and to impose meaningful standards" for financially sound operations on brokerage firms.

Rep. John E. Moss, chairman of the Commerce subcommittee that handles securities legislation, said he thought the study could be completed in two years or less for about $500,000.

Rep. Moss, D., Calif., said the study should cover "the whole process of marketing securities—retail, in the year ended Oct. 31 from wholesale, specialists, underwriting, $40.5 million, $122 a share, in the works."

800 Barrier on the Dow Pierced in Sharp Rally

By Vartan G. Vartan

NEW YORK, Dec. 2 (NYT)—The upward-driving New York Stock Exchange stopped to refuel this morning, then picked up momentum in a dramatic spurt toward the finish that saw it finally crest above the 800 level on the Dow Jones industrial average.

Some glamour issues showed 6-point gains.

"We're seeing skepticism give way to enthusiasm," declared a Wall Street partner.

Analysts kept repeating all during the busy session that the 800 mark posed essentially a "psychological" barrier confronting the Dow on its high road to recovery. Technically, the indicator had achieved "an upside breakout" above a three-month trading range on Monday.

Some Profit-Taking

At 10:30 a.m., the Dow was behind 3.80 in a continuation of yesterday's profit-taking and consolidation move. At noon, it was down less than a point.

Thereafter, the upward speed increased steadily. At 1 p.m., the Dow was running better than 3 points above the close yesterday and, one hour later it showed a gain of 5.89 points at 800.18, an eyelash above the formidable 800 mark.

The Dow, moving ahead 48 points over the last nine trading days, is at its highest level since Jan. 6, when it stood at 803.68.

With large blocks continuing to appear throughout the session, the NYSE tape lagged three minutes behind floor transactions at today's close.

Volume amounted to 17.96 million shares, down somewhat from yesterday's 20.11 million shares, but in the first 11 months this year, daily volume averaged 11.21 million shares.

What every investor needs to know about his broker:

Seven vital questions and how they are answered
by Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc., the world's largest stock and commodities broker.

What is the calibre of my investment representative? Only one in 10 of those who apply to Merrill Lynch are accepted. Each undergoes a rigorous 18-month training programme including 3½ months at New York Headquarters. Total cost about $20,000.00 each. The result—a high degree of competence.

2 Does he depend wholly on commission? No. Every Merrill Lynch investment representative receives a salary. He may get a bonus, but it is not based on a flat percentage of sales. If he thinks you shouldn't buy he can afford to say so. The salary is always there.

3 How is my account supervised? Each Merrill Lynch office has its manager whose job is to assist and guide his staff—not to sell. Except in a very few small offices our managers do not handle accounts. There are other checks too. Frequent visits by top management are standard policy. Another example is the daily stock watch—a computerised system that alerts management whenever an office trades more than 1000 shares of a particular stock in one day. If the stock in question doesn't have the approval of the research division the manager must explain why he felt the transactions were in the best interest of the customers.

4 How objective is the advice I receive? Merrill Lynch separates securities research from sales. Recommendations are based strictly on the quality of a security, not its saleability. Example—if Merrill Lynch investment bankers want to underwrite the stock of a company they must first receive approval from the research division.

5 Do you make markets? Merrill Lynch is a major international market maker and underwriter of investment securities. If we sell you a security we have underwritten, we will buy it back at any time, at the market price.

6 Is customer service growing or stagnant? Since January 1969, Merrill Lynch has invested over $100 m. in improving customer service. This includes $15 m. to open new offices (including three in Europe), $27 m. on training and $10 m. to develop new computer systems.

7 What is your financial position? The capital position of Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc. is more than double the amount needed to meet New York Stock Exchange requirements. At the end of September 1970 total assets were $1,856,557,035. Net capital was $277,159,898. Net income for the first 9 months of the year $20,245,000.

By Alan Truscott

South ventured an opening one-club bid holding a hand that many experts would prefer to pass. A responder holding four-card suits tries to keep the bidding low, so her partner responded one heart and raised the one-club rebid to two.

Two spades is a good contract but it would not be difficult to go down as the cards lie. Some declarers found themselves losing two trump tricks, two diamonds and two clubs. South succeeded in making 10 tricks, an improbable feat. As this was a match-point event, the two over-tricks were worth their weight in gold.

The unbid diamond suit did not appeal to West as a lead, so she had to choose between the three suits the declaring side had bid. A club lead would have been better, but she not unreasonably supposed that the lead of the spade ten, the top of a sequence, would be safer. She was disillusioned by the result.

Many players would make the routine play of a spade honor from dummy at the first trick, but South realized that this could hardly gain. She felt sure that the king was on her right, and when she played low from dummy she was rewarded by the appearance of that card from East.

Note that the defense began with a sure trump trick that became less sure after the first trick: West had occasion to regret that she had not led the four, an improbable fourth-best.

After winning with the spade ace, South led the heart jack and dummy's ace captured West's king. A heart to the nine enabled South to lead a trump and West put up the eight. The jack won in dummy, and the club ace was used as the entry for another trump lead. The seven was finessed - a certainty - and the last trump was drawn.

Two more heart winners were cashed, and West misdefended. Perhaps upset by the developments in the trump suit, she kept the K-Q of clubs and the A-J of diamonds. When a club was played she was endplayed, and South captured her 10th trick with the diamond-king at the finish.
